Charges Against Campbell Not Backed By Evidence

Argyll Campbell, city attorney of Carmel as of the other two cities of the peninsula, charged with having advocated and encouraged the strike of fishermen in Monterey for an $8 per ton price for sardines, was given a public hearing at Colton Hall Friday last. A committee named by city manager of Monterey, R. M. Dorton, conducted the inquiry.

Milus O. Gay, publisher of the Monterey Trader, which had made the charges and had called for the resignation of Campbell as city attorney of Monterey, refused to testify on the grounds that he was not represented by counsel. Also Joseph Cuzensa, formerly manager of the fishermen's organization, who had been allegedly the authority for the story in the Trader, gave the same reason for not taking the witness stand.

The committee in charge of the inquiry was composed of Robert P. Sexton, peninsula manager of the telephone company, Joseph D. Thorn, an insurance man of Monterey, and Bernard Rowntree of Carmel. A number of witnesses, all of whom exonerated Campbell of fomenting the strike, were heard, including Frederick R. Bechdolt, head of the peninsula NRA. compliance committee, which is seeking to adjust the strike.

Argyll Campbell testified that the story and statements printed in the Trader were "absolute, deliberate and malicious falsehoods", and that he intended to sue for libel. Every witness called testified that instead of advocating a strike, Campbell had consistently urged against such action, and for mediation. It was also shown, by the testimony of F. E. Wood, bookkeeper and accountant of the Monterey Sardines Industry, Inc., by Sal Colletto, a director, and by Horace Mercurio, director, that instead of receiving a salary of $10,000 from that organization, as had been alleged, Campbell had not received one cent of salary or fees, and had paid part of his expenses of travel out of his own pocket.

Barco Botich of San Pedro, representative of the Fishermen's Cooperative association, testified that Campbell's action at San Francisco where Campbell opposed the strike had resulted in his losing the election for attorney of the state-wide organization, after being selected by an almost unanimous vote.

No evidence was presented at the sesion that in any way connected Campbell with instigating, fomenting or extending the fishermen's strike, or of receiving a salary or fees as the striking fishermen's attorney or representative. Although the audience included many of the packers, some of whom asked questions of witnesses from the floor, none of them took the witness stand, or attempted to produce evidence against Campbell. Mayor J. L. Steward was an interested visitor at the hearing.

City manager Dorton announced that the meeting would adjourn to a date to be announced later, and that everybody interested would be given an opportunity to be heard. The date has since been set for Monday, October 16.

Music Society Announces Important Winter Season

ELMAN, TERESINA, GIESEKING, MONTEREY PENINSULA ORCHESTRA IN THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE — such is the 1933-34 season of the Carmel Music Society. Carmel has good reason to be proud of a society that offers it a chance to hear IN CARMEL as many as three of the five "big attractions" which are offered on the San Francisco Famous Artist Series given in the Memorial Opera House. The San Francisco course opens with Mischa Elman on October 18, Mr. Elman plays in the Oakland Auditorium on October 20, and opens the Carmel Music Society Series on October 31.

Teresina, the young Spanish dancer who has usurped the place in the public affections of all former exponents of the Spanish dance, is second on the San Francisco course on December 12, but dances in Carmel on December 9, the second attraction in the Carmel Music Society Series.

Gieseking, that giant pianist whose art has enthralled a world used to master pianism, plays the third on the Carmel Series on February 10, appearing in the San Francisco Opera House on February 5 as the fourth attraction in that series. So we do not have to travel up "to town" to hear these great ones but can hear them comfortably at home in the Sunset school auditorium. Last on the winter series is the Children's Crusade, an impressive production of Pierne's great work, by the Monterey Peninsula Orchestra, with Michel Penha as conductor, with a mixed chorus of some eighty voices, a children's chorus of sixty voices, and five soloists. This great oratorio with full orchestra CANNOT be heard in San Francisco, nor anywhere else in the state that has been heard of. But Carmel and the orchestra directed by Mr. Penha, with its choruses directed by Fenton Foster and Madeline Curry, all made possible by the Carmel Music Society, will be heralded far and wide for such a magnificent production, and without doubt people will come from all points of the state to hear.

It is understood that the summer season, which has not yet been announced, will be devoted entirely to the activities of the orchestra, conducted by Michel Penha, and the Parlow-Penha Quartet, with Kathleen Parlow, Ralph Linsley, Abraham Weiss, and Michel Penha. Thus far the Carmel Music Society divided its offerings between the presentation of three of the greatest artists who this season visit the coast, and fostering the more creative work of its amateur orchestra and summer-resident quartet.

Employment Commission Makes Final Statement

At the last meeting of the Employment Commission the treasurer, James L. Cockburn, was instructed to publish a financial report covering the entire work of the commission from its beginning in November 1931 to the present time. Included in the report which follows is an additional sum of $49.00 received from the faculty of Sunset school subsequent to the meeting.

The following information accompanies the report:

The financial statement shows $9304.82 paid for labor to Carmel persons in need of employment.

To this should be added $300 which the Red Cross paid directly to the workers in addition to the $200 which was paid through the commission and included in this report.

The issue of one thousand Carmel Dollars has supplied a further and very necessary $1000 of the payroll to those for whom employment was provided.

Carmel people have responded very generoualy to every appeal of the commission, however, in view of the fact that the county now has state and federal funds available to meet the unemployment situation, the local commission does not feel justified in the continuance of appeals to Carmel residents for funds and is therefore about to close its books

MATHIOT SEEKS RETRIAL ON GRAND THEFT VERDICT

Motion for retrial in the case of K. D. Mathiot, well known Carmel Valley rancher convicted September 29th, in superior court at Salinas on the charge of cattle rustling will be ruled upon by Judge H. G. Jorgensen today. Since the jury verdict of guilty the pronouncement of sentence on Mathiot and his asserted accomplice, Victor Trembath, an ex-employee, has been continued several times. Defense Counsel E. A. Williams, Jr., has been joined by Attorneys Bardin and Harrington and new evidence has been produced in effort to gain retrial.

Mathiot insists that hides of animals assertedly stolen were those of stock he had bought, and that these hides were not concealed about the place but were hung on a fence in plain sight. The action of Trembath, he says, is a frame-up to get even for fancied wrongs. Both Mathiot and Trembath were found guilty on two counts, and sentence of from one to ten years could be imposed.

Willard Whitney is now recuperating at home from an emergency operation for appendicitis performed in the Cottage hospital in Salinas.

ZIMMERMAN MAKES ART OF HORSESHOE PITCHING

Throwing ringers with the ease of a cook throwing flapjacks, Guy Zimmerman, champion horseshoe pitcher of the middle west came to Carmel last week and upset everybody. Upset everybody because it was all so simple, whether is was lighting a match at forty feet, ringing hidden stakes, pitching accurately through a small loop, ringing legs of a chair that carried a live load or offering to take on all comers at any length of game.

Dave Nixon, the best hurler in these parts, was unable to hold an early lead against Zimmerman in a contest cheered by a good sized crowd up there on Ocean and San Carlos, but he showed better form than in some time.

Carmel can now expect an epidemic of the horseshoe game, and owners of horses are warned to double nail the shoes of their animals against theft.

INQUEST FINDS NO FOUL PLAY IN BELL'S DEATH

After interviewing relatives and other witnesses at the inquest into the death of John Bell, young Carmel business man who died of injuries received when his beer truck crashed into Toro creek bridge on the Salinas Highway one night a month ago, the jury returned a verdict of accidental death with no reference to probable cause of accident.

Bell stated afetr the wreck that he was fighting two men at the time he crashed the bridge abutment, insisting that as he left Corbett's Inn, several miles up the road they had leaped on the running board

Earthquake Report On Sunset School Summarized

The following abridgment of the state engineer's report regarding the condition of the Sunset School buildings was made by C. J. Ryland and checked and approved by W. O. Raiguel. This abridgment is offered for the convenience of the general public. The full report is available at the school office.

Dates of Reports, July 17 and 25, 1933.
Address to Sunset School District, Carmel, California.

As per your request the Division of Architecture, Department of Public Works, has investigated the structural adequacy of the Sunset School to withstand earthquakes, wind pressure and the loads it is required to carry "without excessive or undue strain."

The investigation was based on an examination of the buildings and plans.

In formulating the conclusions and recommendations the "Division of Architecture has considered it outside the scope of the investigation to make definite recommendations with regard to the economic feasibility of the reconstruction . . . Consequently, where reconstruction is possible, the nature and extent of repairs necessary have been described without reference to justification for the expenditure involved."

"It should be pointed out and kept in mind when reading the detailed report that prior to the enactment of the socalled earthquake law,very few building codes or ordinances required that provision be made for building structures to withstand earthquake."

"Critical examination of the various buildings disclosed that they were in excellent condition and that materials and workmanship entering into their construction were of noticeably good quality indicating careful inspection and conscientious service in the construction of these building units to safely support such nominal loads as they might be expected to carry."

Earthquakes produce violent, alternating motion combined with impact which "raises questions entirely apart from the basis upon which these buildings were originally designed."

Therefore, "to reduce any possible earthquake hazzard to a minimum, it is necessary that certain reconstruction be undertaken."

The following suggestions are only general:

"If the Board of Education of the City of Carmel decides to proceed with this work" they should employ an architect or structural engineer to prepare the plans and "submit them to the State Division of Architecture for approval before starting any work."

Any strengthening would have to meet the approval of the State Division of Architecture and be made strong enough to carry 5 per cent of the weight of the building pushing against the building from any angle and applied horizontally against the building.

*Note: The words in quotation are a direct copy of the report.

YOUNG ARTISTS PLEASE IN JOINT RECITAL

By Dora Hagemeyer

Ruth Wilson and Corinne Frederick in joint recital last Saturday night at the Denny-Watrous gallery gave their audience a real surprise. Ruth Wilson, a young violinist already well known on the concert stage, opened the program with the Brahms Sonata in D Minor. She played with inherent discrimination and understanding. Her tone was vibrant and carefully controlled, giving a sense of reserve power beyond that which she chose to display.

But it was in the more modern numbers that she proved her alert contemporary spirit. Nigun from Suite Baal Shem by Bloch gave the first indication of her unique gift. She plays in the idiom of her own time—an accompishment rare in violin playing. She has identified herself with the peculiar sonority of the new music and, because of this, she plays it with conviction. Her playing of the Sumare from Saudanes do Brazil, by Milhaud, was perfectly remarkable. She produced some effects which were absolutely unfamiliar to the ear. They gave a sense of new possibilities in technique and indicated the peculiar contribution of the violin to the performance of modern music.

Corinne Frederick in the Allegro from Sonata in C Minor by Mozart held the audience immediately with her virility and ease of performance. She played with the inevitable detachment which distinguishes the true artist. Her music was a thing itself, unmixed with personality. To have arrived at this point of effortless power proves a long devotion to the perfection of technique.

Two Brahms numbers followed the Mozart, and towards the end of the program, the delightful La Poupee by Villa-Lobos and De Jongleur by Toch were executed with unfailing brilliance.

These two young women deserved a much better audience than was possible in Carmel at the end of the summer season, but we hope to hear them again some day and to receive them with a packed house.

ORCHESTRA REHEARSALS

Orchestra rehearsals are held every Sunday evening in the Denny-Watrous gallery, from eight to ten o'clock. Michel Penha comes down from San Francisco to direct, and is at present preparing pieces for the Children's Concert, which will be some time during December.

Although the full amount necessary for the rearranging of Mr. Penha's services as conductor of the orchestra has not been raised, the Carmel Music Society is going ahead with its winter and summer season of the orchestra under his direction, with the confidence that there will be sufficient support from the community and peninsula for this most important and thrilling of community activities to carry through successfully. Let anyone who has from ten, twenty-five or fifty cents a month, a dollar a year, or more to give to the orchestra—let that one go into the Denny-Watrous gallery and give it, that the necessary amount for maintenance and conducting may be raised.

OLVERA STREET PUPPETS IN CARMEL NEXT SUNDAY

This Sunday Carmel will be the first stopping point for the Olvera Street Puppets on their transcontinental tour. This Nationally known group has been showing daily for five years in its own theatre in Los Angeles and takes its name from the famous Mexican street where they play.

At the Carmel Playhouse Sunday afternoon and evening they will present two novel offerings, "Jimmy's Exciting Adventures At The Circus," at 3:00 p.m., and "Puppet Gaieties of '33" at 8:30 p.m., the latter described as a musical review with marionettes.

Greta Garbo, Marie Dressler Clark Gable, Joan Crawford and other notables will appear in exaggerated mimicry. Puppets appeal to all ages today as they have through the centuries, and the Olevera Street group equals any in the country as dramatic critics have so often commented.

Tickets are on sale at the booth across from the postoffice.

KUSTER WILL PRODUCE DRAMA BY BENN LEVY

Bringing to Carmel, "Art and Mrs. Bottle," by Benn Levy, will be presented by Edward Kuster at the Community Playhouse October 26, 27 and 28 wtih Georgia Wapple, of Broadway experience, in the leading role of Celia.

The Bottle children, Michael and Judy, played by Philip Remer and Yvonne Castle, become artists in spite of the sanitary engineering trade of their father, or perhaps because of it, and against a background of satirical comedy they show that art is merely a backwash in a world of industry.

Arthur Hately does Max Lightly, the talented roue, and Albert Van Houtte is George Bottle. These players have been in many recent plays and are favorites with peninsula audiences, and supporting them are Edwina Pinkham as Sonia Tippet the artist's model, and Oudine Howser is Parsons, the parlor maid, and Tom Crosthwaite as Charlie Dawes.

This is the first production by Mr. Kuster since the famous "Amaco", which had its premiere here in August. "Art and Mrs. Bottle" had long runs in London and New York, and in the latter city Katherine Hepburn and Jane Cowl were featured. Carmel will have the first western stageing of this drama, and Mr. Kuster plans to take it on a trip that will include Salinas and Watsonville before local showing, putting these towns in the class of Boston and Philadelphia for Broadway offerings.

Tickets will be on sale at the kiosk opposite the postoffice in the near future.

Miss Grace Hamilton of Carmel is spending a month in Berkeley with friends.

PREMIERE OF MASTEN DRAMA AT THE COMMUNITY THEATRE

Last night Carmel made drama history again with a play premiere, this time "The Devil Who Saw God," by Richard Masten, Carmel author of "Saint Udo" and other works of fiction.

The Carmel Community Players were fortunate in getting Frederick Burt to direct the production, and his free hand in the casting assured notable entertainment. It dealt with what would happen if a devil glimpsed God and the plan of Hell had to be revised, and his treatment of it brought out all of Masten's originality without triteness.

Featured in the large cast were such well known players as Edward Kuster, as Mammon, president of the Universal Fire and Brimstone Company, Arthur Hately, as Beelzebub and Milton Latham, as Satan. These dictators of the underworld decided to investigate the rumored existence of a Divine Being and sent two earnest young devils to investigate in the persons of Sibyl Leonard and Robert Edgren, Jr. Up in Heaven they found Barnabas in his blacksmith shop hammering out eternal truths. In this role was Byington Ford, assisted by John Sheridan taking his first step along the path of his famous father, Frank.

In a cast that has many outstanding parts were found Frank Work, Scott Douglas, Lloyd Weer, Philip Walker, Peter O'Crotty, David Cook, Fern Hyde, George McMenamin, Lorraine Plank, Philip Remer and many other notable players. A complete review of the drama will appear in next week's copy of the Pine Cone.

The play wil be repeated tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening. Tickets may be had at Staniford's Drug Store, phone Carmel 150, or at the Community Theatre boxoffice on Monte Verde Street just before performances.

NEW ECONOMICS MOVEMENT EXPLAINED BY DR. ADDIS

Professor Thomas Addis, of Stanford University, addressed a group that overflowed the Greene Studio on Lincoln Street Sunday evening, on the subject The New Economics, sponsored by the New Economics League of San Francisco.

"Gold will lose its glitter," he said, "when money loses its value. That time may be very near at hand, for the old system of government has entirely broken down and only by facing facts and not taking other people's ideas can we build for the future. We must be economic scientists devoid of emotion, and must look upon revolution as a natural thing and plan accordingly."

Trees and stars have revolutions ranging from orderly growth to immense destruction, and mankind has his own revolution that partakes of each, he said. With diagrams he showed how Capitalism had developed from Feudalism, and how the Private Banks had topped Capitalism only to fall victim to enormous commodity production with dwindling commodity absorption. Absorption meant money and the producers had most of the money, thus bringing on their own financial suicide.

"Air and water are plentiful, hence have little value. When money is plentiful it will be the same, and system of social credit will bring about an absolute economic security that has been impossible under the now smashed system of the past few years. The miserable thing of having to earn a living will be forgotten when government gets control of credit and releases producers from the shackles of money."

A third political party is contemplated that will unite Socialists, Liberty Party, Deyites, Russelites and other far left groups, and Prof. Addis said there would be a California candidate for governor who would run on a free money platform. He did not name him.

Carmel Communists were especially invited as "our comrades" to put forward their schemes for recontruction, but instead of being ready they took repeated urging and finally direct asking before Rhys Williams, long a communistic author and Russian advocate, arose to agree with many of the speaker's ideas and tell briefly of the Russian panacea. Comrade Ella Winter did not speak.

"Money is needed," concluded Prof. Addis, "to break down the intellectual silence of the powers still in control of papers, radio, pictures and the like and if we act quickly in the next two years we may get through our revolution more like the unfolding tree than the cataclysmic star."

On Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Albert Acton Hall, on Ocean and Dolores, there was further informal talk about organizing a unit of the New Economics group here. Addis regretted that local communists had neglected his invitation for a discussion, as he had anticipated learning their constructive views, if any, in open meeting.

RITCHIE TELLS OF FEDERAL LAND BANK

Returning home over the weekend, Robert Welles Ritchie told briefly of his work with the Federal Land Bank as public relations council. The schedule calls for intensified effort to put in the field appraisers who are thoroughly in touch with agricultural conditions and bank requirements, and Ritchie's position is that of publicity mediator for the four states under the jurisdiction of the Berkeley headquarters, namely California, Nevada, Utah and Arizona.

RED CROSS EXECUTIVES DISCUSS COMING NEEDS

A meeting of the Executive Board of the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross was held on Monday, at which time the budget for the coming year was discussed.

After studying the disbursements for the past year and estimating the needs of the coming twelve months, the committee decided that $3,000 must be raised to carry on the relief work. It was pointed out that the Red Cross is the only relief organization operating in Carmel, and that it has to look for its support almost entirely to contributions given directly at the Annual Drive which begins on November 11th.

At the Regional Conference held in Monterey last week the Annual Roll Call which takes place nationally commencing on November 11 was one of the subjects receiving particular attention.

Douglas H. Moore, director of Public Information and the Roll Call, Pacific Branch, spoke on this subject as did Mrs. Robert Stanton, chairman of the Carmel Chapter and H. E. Robinson, Chairman of the Gilroy Chapter. Ten delegates from the Carmel Chapter and Doris Chapman, chairman of the Junior Chapter attended the conference.

ALARM DISTURBS QUIET OF FIRE PREV NTION WEEK

The place to burn firewood is in the fireplace and not out in the open where you chop down a tree. Thursday evening the firewagons answered the siren and dusted over to the south end of the Eighty Acres where smoke was curling up among the pines, and after serious use of the nearest garden hose it was officially declared out.

Raiguel Checks

"I have checked this synopsis with the original reports and it seems to me to express briefly and as clearly as possible their rather complicated and involved contents.

The impression I get from going over the reports is that Carmel may consider itself fortunate in the condition of its school buildings even though they may not meet all the requirements of a law written long after they were designed."

IT'S OUR RESPONSIBILITY

The undersigned building supply houses signed the NRA agreeing to do our part. But we can do our part only with the cooperation of the consuming public in doing its part as well. We hire more men, work them fewer hours . . . but unless you other people continue the enthusiastic support you have shown thus far, the fine start we have made will be of no use.

Look around your home . . . pick out the many things that ned to be done to it, and have them done now. Keep up the exterior appearance of your home. Eliminate leaks. Make it more convenient. There must be many things that need to be done, and willt the many things that need to be done

Having these things done immediately will save you real money. Prices are already up from 25 per cent to 50 per cent and are going higher nearly every day. Acting at once will save you money, stimulate employment and industry, circulate dollars, and hasten prosperity.

There is no industry that NEEDS cooperation more than the building industry. Laborers, carpenters, plumbers, lumbermen, etc., were the first to feel the depression, and are the ones who have felt it terrifically for over four years. We are helping them. Will you?

Hands Off.

Tinkering with the zoning ordinance of Carmel is dangerous. That basic law for the protection of our comfort and beauty may not be perfect, but it is serving its purpose so well that any changes in it are going to be questioned. The reasons for advocating any change will be investigated closely.

It took several attempts, a special election, and the most bitter village controversy in its history to put the zoning ordinance upon the books. Years were spent in formulating it. Almost every line of its long wording was contested. When it was finally passed, it became the Magna Charta of Carmel, and the great majority of the residents breathed their relief that the artistic rights of the village were protected.

There can not be made a zoning ordinance that will not do an occasional injustice. Set-back lines are frequent causes of dissatisfaction, nor is it possible to fix them so they will always be equitable. Yet set-back lines are imperative to prevent unsightliness and the dangerous crowding that increases the fire hazard. To reopen the old battle for an adjustment of set-back lines is to renew a bitterness that will find expression in attacks upon other features of the ordinance, and put us back into the war of the early '20s.

The worst feature of the zoning law is not in the law itself, but the failure of its enforcement. It has been violated too often without punishment. Yet it has served well on the whole. Carmel has grown nicely and is artistically satisfactory under its provisions. The occasional violations have been less important than they seemed at the time. Had there been no zoning ordinance, or had it been less stringent, the resulting city during the days of swift growth in the latter '20s, would have appalled.

The city council that has the temerity to open up Carmel's basic law, the zoning ordinance, to be tampered with and hacked at by every man with an ax to grind, is going to find itself in a mess of trouble. Carmel will oppose any attempts to change its provisions. Carmel asks that it be left as is.

Carmel's Trees

The cutting, trimming and felling of trees on the public's properties in Carmel is the business of the whole city, and into the hands of its representatives, the councilmen, the people have placed that trust by ordinance. No tree may be permitted cut on the city streets except by permission of the entire council, nor may that permissive right be delegated to others. That is the law in Carmel..

Gradually the law has lost its authority. Trees have come down that there is no record of a permit by the council, no action in public meeting. As the council slackened its methods, passing authority to individuals, the loss of trees has increased. Now it is suggested that the old ordinance be rescinded, and that permits be granted by the superintendent of streets.

Carmel does not ask to have the felling or trimming of trees made easier. It would prefer that its elected councilmen, in whom it gives confidence, retain the power of life and death to the trees. It would like them to investigate every request for a permit, and grant them only when certain of the need. It would ask them take more trouble, not less, in this matter. And it certainly does not like the idea of rescinding an ordinance that, while it forces responsibilities and additional work upon the councilmen, serves to protect one of the greatest of Carmel's assets, its trees. Let the ordidance stand, and bring it back to a vital thing of benefit to the village by enforcing it as it is worded.

From a Dark City

I long for the heat of the desert
To wrap me in folds of light—
As warm as a striped serape
Not only to touch but sight.

I long for the breadth of the desert,
For spaces to stretch my soul
Where thought takes a new dimension
Embracing a larger whole.

Mary Owen Lewis

Presentiment

I well remember how the gate would swing
In our young games so wide, my dear, so wide!
And you would, laughing, run ahead and hide
Around the pine tree and beyond the bend,
How bitterly in childish grief I cried
In sudden loneliness for a missing friend.
And how I waited for the game to end!

The game is ended and the gate swings
wide,
And I am weeping for a missing friend.

JOY O'HARA "In Wings."

Friends

"They give back the magic to ordinary life."
Jaime, the whimsical, gay, debonair,
Amused by many things . . .
And yet, as flint responds to steel, aware
Of sharp-edged beauty. Candle flare Makes one recall his quiet voice; the words he read.
"That line is beautiful" he said;
And closed the book, and left us wondering there.

Lorena—wistful, sweet—with haunted eyes
Of infinite understanding—gently wise—Changeful of mood; remote; then quickly bold.
Her words seem shot with gold
And swift as wings,
Suggesting beautiful, elusive things.

Juanita—weaver of the magic play—
The game begins. Green twilight lives again . . .
The jungle grows beneath the pen's sure stroke
Then, with the artist's witchery
A gay thought—and the listening silence broke;
The game goes on . . .
Each one takes up his interrupted day.

—Louise Starr Peck.

Buy Until It Helps

. . "Buy Now!" was the wartime slogan, and it meant subscribing to Liberty Bonds.

"Buy Now!" is today's slogan, and it means subscribing to the NRA war against depression by keeping money active. When you buy now you are subscribing to national bonds in the form of commodities, and your subscriptions will keep your army of employers and employees at top strength on the fighting front until the administration's aims are fully achieved.

Poison—Take Care!

Look out for the Black Widow. Red spots on her belly mark her as the most dangerous of the breed. Her bite is poison and worse than a rattlesnake.

A number of these perilous spiders have been found in Carmel recently, two in the Eighty Acres, others in the very heart of town. The bite is said to be fatal. The spider is shiny-black, large, and has two bright red spots on the stomach.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

Richard H. Masten, whose play, "The Devil Who Saw God," is being given its premiere at the Community Playhouse next weekend, although by birth an Oregonian, is Californian by descent. His grandfather was a '49-er, a banker in San Francisco during the days of gold, and Dick's father, too, was prominent in San Francisco's affairs.

Dick graduated from Amherst college directly into the army, becoming an aviator at Mather Field, Sacramento. Mustered out at the end of the war, he sort of dropped into the newspaper business, starting as a cub-reporter on the Springfield, Mass. Union. In a few months he was associate editor of that paper, then came home to Portland, Oregon, to be an editorial writer on the "Telegram."

On a lazy tour of the world that Dick felt was needed to give him first-hand information of the matters about which he editorialized, he met Hildreth Taylor on the steamer at Hong Kong. Hildreth told him that Carmel was the one place really worth seeing, and married Dick so that she could show him it. Now they live here, and Dick writes fiction and plays instead of editorials. His novel, "Saint Udo" had a very fair success and encouraging reviews.

Dick's mother was, for many years, a teacher in the Portland schools. The other day Dick took his first-born by the hand and led him to the Forest Hill school, where the young man would begin an education. Miss Minnie Harper, principal, making necessary inquiries of her new pupil, found to her surprise that the lad's grandmother had been one of her instructors.

A story of Dick's world-wanderings has for its settings a watering place on the Mediterranean, Antibes, and the aristocratic Hotel du Cap. Dick was lonely there, for his limited means would not allow him to play with the millionaire guests, and he picked up a quiet, shy acquaintance on the beach, an elderly man who seemed as alone as himself. They bathed together and had long talks sitting on the sands together. The man was English, and Dick imagined him to be, like himself, seeing the world on limited allowance and enjoying a treat that he had saved and scrimped for many years to make possible.

One day George Selves, correspondent of the New York Tribune, came to the hotel and naturally dug out the other American newspaper man there, Dick Masten. There was an important inter-national conference on relative to the stabilization of the French franc, and it was being quietly and secretly conducted at Antibes. "I thought," said Selves ruefully, "that I had the inside on the story until I saw you on the beach this morning."

"Yes," said Dick puzzled, "and why did you change your mind then?"

"You were quite evidently in the confidence of Sir Montagu."

"Sir Montague? And who is Sir Montagu?"

"The man you bathed with, talked with so long. Sir Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England."

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson Jeffers have received from Colonel Maurice Moore a photograph of the cairn on Castle Island, Lough Carra, County Mayo, Ireland, in which the ashes of his brother George Moore are deposited. The ashes are enclosed in a bronze urn, the exact copy of an urn of Bronze Age period in the Dublin Museum. On a tablet by the cairn is carved:

"George Moore, b. Moore Hall 1852, d. London 1933. He deserted his family and friends for his art but because he was faithful to his art, his family and friends reclaimed his ashes for Ireland."

The picture was sent at the request of Dr. Gogarty. Dr. Oliver Gogarty, Irish senator and man of letters, was in Carmel last spring, and talk at Tor House turned to the recent death of Moore and the pilgrimage the Jeffers family had made to Moore Hall. Dr. Gogarty and one other were the only two outside his kin who "made the journey by land and over the unpermitted ferry" with the ashes.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin G. Pinkham and their four daughters, Marion, Betty, Edwina and Ruth, will leave this week for a residence in Los Gatos.

It's not only better times are coming back, better things are coming with them, and nobody is more delighted than we are. Better Things has been our middle name right along.

We have felt a little heroic at times, sticking to our guns of Quality service and refusing to go in for price at any price, when price seemed to many to be everything. We offered bargains a plenty, but we refused to sell bargains that our customers would regret.

We have always sold a laundry service that is second to none, week in and week out, year in and year out, and our many years of experience with this kind of service have taught us how to give you the utmost quality for your money.

We gladly welcome this coming of better things—happier people making better things for happier people. It's a pleasant prospect, isn't it?

Dorsett comes to Carmel from the East, and is well known for his activity in recreational work. In Wichita he was with the Church Federation, and in Estes Park in charge of the Boys' Camp, while more recently he was with the Mayfield Community church.

Ladies in charge of the evening were Mrs. Clara Beller, the vice president, and at the tables were Mesdames Fenner, Wyman, Laumeister and Miss Culbertson. Decorations were done by Mrs. Beardsley and Mrs. Laumeister. Mrs. Douglas, Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Nye arranged the tables, assisted by Mrs. Beardsley, Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Nixon, Miss White, Miss Harington and many others.

Miles Bain of Carmel sang several selections, with Miss Hall, Salinas, accompanying at the piano.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS HOLD SESSION

"To talk about disarmament at Geneva is to laugh as long as our country is sending munitions via back door to every little war going on in the world at the present time." So stated Mrs. William Palmer Lucas before the Peninsula League of Women Voters at their monthly luncheon meeting Wednesday at Holman's Solarium.

Mrs. Lucas' address was enthusiastically received by the 175 Peninsula women present. Notwithstanding the fact that the wave of internationalism, which was uppermost from 1918 to 1928 has been replaced by a wave of nationalism, Mrs. Lucas is not pessimistic regarding the future for she states, "Human progress seldom moves in a straight line."

At the request of Mrs. Joseph Schoeninger, the president, the chairmen of the various departments of the League briefly outlined the programs of their study groups.

The Policy of the Carmel Music Society

(AN ANSWER TO HAL GARROTT'S EDITORIAL)

BY C. B. VAN NIEL

It was with great pleasure—and with a sense of relief, too—that I read in Mr. Garrott's editorial (Friday, September 29) the announcement that "The Carmel Music Society intends resuming its old policy . . ."

On the remainder of this first sentence I venture, however, one remark; the old policy was not to my way of looking at things, that of "hiring high priced Eastern virtuosi for its winter concert season," but of bringing great, i.e., first class musicians, i.e. artists, to a Carmel audience.

It seems obvious that this is the correct interpretation of the policy of the Carmel Music Society. Just as obvious as the impossibility to express artistic achievements by monetary measures, or to evaluate the intrinsic beauty of a concert by the amount of applause bestowed upon the performer.

Which were the reasons for the change in policy of the Carmel Music Society? I hope that the Board of Directors realized that the Music Society expected too much of local talent when they arranged the concerts for last year's season.

I do not dispute the value and importance of the Monterey Peninsula Orchestra for those who participate in it. But I do claim that it is asking a good deal of the audience to enjoy these concerts.

The "Children's Concert" was meant well; probably most children looking and listening, enjoyed it. But if I want to educate my children in the appreciation of music I would rather not have them attend another of those concerts.

The idea of a local amateur orchestra is all right, provided that the achievements of this orchestra are not overrated. And the latter is undoubtedly the case if the orchestra is allowed to give concerts in the regular concert series because its concerts cannot and should not be considered on a line with those given by outstanding artists.

If Mr. Garrott's statement concerning the intentions of the Board of Directors be correct it means that the Carmel Music Society still feels the desireability of enabling the inhabitants of the Monterey Peninsula to experience the inestimable influence and inspiration of great art three to four times during the winter season. I am glad that the Board is of the opinion that there is a need for this. It also means that the Directors expect to find a sufficient number of people in favor of this attitude so that there will be a sufficient financial support of their program. The public might well appreciate this high opinion on the part of the Music Society. May the subscriptions prove that the Carmel Music Society is not overestimating the musical appreciation of the public!

ALLEN KNIGHT INJURED WHEN CAR STRIKES POLE

Allen Knight, Commodore of the Carmel Yacht Club, and M. E. Conger, the Monterey clubman, suffered cuts and bruises when their car missed a curve at the approach of the Salinas River bridge last week and crashed into a telephone pole. At the Salinas general hospital they were given emergency treatment and were able to return home shortly afterward.

LARRITTS RETURN FROM YELLOWSTONE PARK HOTEL

Returning to Carmel for another winter, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Larritt arrived from Yellowstone Park where Mr. Larritt has managed Old Faithful Inn this last season. For many years he has been in charge of Park hotels, the Grand Canyon in particular, and he tells us that this season has been one of the best in some time.
